Hurricane Gustav and a sour economy: They framed your life, as well as the life of the Baton Rouge Area Foundation in 2008. Neither trouble was expected; both were met with strategy and action—and we emerged as a better region for besting the challenges.

We watched Gustav heading to New Orleans, only to see the storm veer in our direction, tearing off roofs and turning off lights, leaving people in the dark for weeks in some neighborhoods. Our communities stood up. People walked up and down streets, seeking people they could help. We shared food over outdoor gas grills and told tales about the storm.

At the Foundation, the staff gathered the day after Gustav for marching orders—fan across the region, they were told, to check on shelters and to deliver food, ice and whatever else may be needed.

The staff was encouraged by what it saw, a signal that many lessons from Katrina had been implemented. Most shelters were ably caring for evacuees. They had adequate supplies and evacuees were resting comfortably. Just a handful of shelters were found to be unacceptably bad; at one, hospice patients were sleeping on the floor. A woman in a wheelchair clenched our photographer's hand and pleaded for help. She didn't want to spend her last days in such a place.

As after Katrina, the vow was taken to continue improving the disaster reply. The Foundation's partnership relations division began working with responders on more rigorous standards for storm shelters.

Another storm knocked us about. The economy drifted south, prompting us to counter by tightening our operating budget. Our fund donors also had less available to make grants, so we shared technical knowledge with nonprofits that is expected to help them become stronger across the generations.

We also sharpened philanthropy by improving services to fund donors. They now have an online portal for checking their charitable giving, recommending grants, examining nonprofits and more.

Afterword

Christel Slaughter has served this Foundation as Chair for the past two years. The first year was one of significant growth and service. The second culminated with the largest downturn in our economy since the Great Depression. Despite the significant challenges and opportunities she faced, she provided precisely the right tone of leadership to the Foundation. To only thank Christel for her extraordinary two years of service would be a major oversight. Since the early 1990s, our outgoing chair has been at the forefront of some of the most important projects the Foundation has undertaken. And I cannot think of an initiative where her input was not requested, and when that input did not shape our response. Thank you, Christel, for your infinitely gracious and thoughtful leadership of the Baton Rouge Area Foundation during interesting times.

—John G. Davies, President and CEO

There was core work to do in 2008. Nearly $15 million in grants were written to nonprofits last year, boosting total Foundation grants to nearly $220 million over 44 years.

The money helped kids like Lige Travis, who got a special bike that may help him manage Joubert Syndrome, a disease that makes it difficult for him to walk. You can read about Lige's triumph in this review of 2008. It shows the power of philanthropy, how people share their earnings with strangers and change the world with no expectation of recognition.

The grants are made possible by fund donors, who, along with the Foundation, also underwrite our civic advancement projects. These are the long-term initiatives that fundamentally alter the region.

Last year, the creation of the East Baton Rouge Redevelopment Authority was among these initiatives.

Formation of the Authority with Mayor Kip Holden demonstrates that change is not linear. The Authority, which will return blighted properties to commerce, sprang from a project to invigorate Old South Baton Rouge. We expect that the Authority will speed up the rebuilding of not only Old South Baton Rouge, but also other neighborhoods that require a jolt to start becoming whole again.

In 2008, the Foundation started CityStats, a long-term project that measures the quality of life in East Baton Rouge through statistical indicators. CityStats will be a guidemap for improving the parish. You can view the first report at BRCityStats.org.

We also kept rebuilding downtown. Nearly $1.5 billion has been invested over the past decade to build offices, residences, restaurants and shops in the city center. The resurgence of the area can be partly credited to Plan Baton Rouge, an effort funded by the Foundation a decade ago. In 2008, the 10th anniversary of Plan Baton Rouge was marked by funding for PBR Phase Two. What's more, the Foundation opened new residences and offices on the downtown Arts Block.

In closing, I want to thank my family for their generosity during the two years I've chaired the Foundation. I wish Alice Greer, the new chair, all good things in 2009.

A special gratitude to fund donors and members. Together, they give people like Lige Travis the hope that turns life into a good ride.

Sincerely,

Lige Travis scoots across the floor on his britches. It's the only way he can get around. Unbalanced by a rare brain disorder, the 9-year-old can't walk without falling down. But with wheels, he has a chance. A Baton Rouge Area Foundation grant has given Lige a bike that's as special as he is.

The bike enables half of kids with Joubert Syndrome to acquire balance—first on wheels, then on their own two feet. With the help of his new bike, there's hope that Lige will walk by age 13.

All the way home from the McMains Children's Development Center, the boy craned his neck and stared at his new bike, as though it might vanish if he took his eyes off it. "Is it really mine?" he asked his mother. Soon, Lige was racing that bike against kids like him. Winning his first race, he thrust up his hands in a gesture of triumph that his mother, Tammy, had never seen from her son. "It's his freedom."

The grant—and thousands more worth $15 million last year—were made possible by fund donors and members of the Foundation. Donors recommend grants from their established charitable funds; members—680 strong—provide the money that lets staff work each day, including reviewing grant requests and making sure the money makes the region a better place for all.

go, Lige, go

Who we are: The Baton Rouge Area Foundation is among more than 700 community foundations across the country. We work to improve the quality of life for all people in the region. We do so in two ways.

First, we connect philanthropists with exceptional nonprofits to make sure the needs of our neighbors are met. Our donors, for instance, fund safe havens for abused women and children, provide vaccinations to prevent cancer and pay for teacher supplies. Last year, we provided thousands of grants worth about $15 million.

Second, the Foundation invests in and manages pivotal projects. Working with partners, we have revitalized downtown Baton Rouge, are rebuilding neighborhoods between downtown and LSU, supporting the improvement of public education through experimental schools and much more.

Who we serve: We conduct projects and provide grants in eight parishes in South Central Louisiana: Ascension, East Baton Rouge, West Baton Rouge, East Feliciana, West Feliciana, Iberville, Livingston and Pointe Coupée. The Foundation also works in St. Tammany, Tangipahoa, Washington and St. Helena parishes through the Northshore Community Foundation, a support organization that operates independently from a home base in Mandeville. The Foundation provides support services to the Community Foundation of Southwest Louisiana. Based in Lake Charles, that foundation serves Calcasieu, Beauregard, Allen, Cameron and Jefferson Davis parishes.

How we work: The Foundation is funded in several ways. One key way is through generous people who start donor-advised funds to provide grants to nonprofit groups and community projects. Philanthropists can start a tax-deductible charitable fund for $10,000. To learn more about charitable funds, call Stewart Jones at 225.387.6126.

The Foundation also is funded through earnings on unrestricted assets, which were donated by philanthropists and grow over time.

Among Foundation assets is the Wilbur Marvin Foundation, which is comprised of real estate left by the late Wilbur Marvin. Those real estate assets include the Hilton Capitol Center Hotel in Baton Rouge, as well as shopping centers in Louisiana, Florida and Puerto Rico. The real estate assets are managed by Commercial Properties Realty Trust.

What's our size: At year-end 2008, the Foundation had estimated assets of $530 million, making it among the top-30 largest community foundations in the country. Since 1964, the Foundation has issued more than $220 million in grants to support our community. Also, the Foundation has contracted with for-profit organizations to provide social benefits to the region, such as guidance on health care reform and direction on whether to build a new airport or invest in our existing ones.

Huey Long himself couldn't have inspired the crowd more. At the Old State Capitol, Andres Duany preached a vision of a new downtown Baton Rouge, built from the ideas that citizens themselves traded back and forth at open community meetings. His audience stirred with excitement. That was 10 years ago, and an astonishing transformation followed Duany's performance. Now, our downtown has indeed become a destination, with nearly $1.5 billion invested in the Shaw Center for the Arts, new offices, restaurants, housing and entertainment venues.

A decade of progress deserves an encore. The Foundation provided $350,000 of nearly $600,000 for Plan Baton Rouge Phase 2, a strategy for further realizing the vision and implementing new downtown projects over the next 10 years. Started in 2008, the updated plan will be completed this year. Founded on public input like the first phase, the project will take into account many of the good ideas now circulating among the citizenry, like remaking Government Street to reconnect Beauregard Town and forging stronger links between downtown and LSU through development along Nicholson Drive. With Plan Baton Rouge Phase 2, the stage is set for another 10 years of dramatic change.

We already know how much South Louisianans appreciate the good life, and we know that, for many, Baton Rouge is the place to live it. But just how good is it? How do you measure the quality of life here in Baton Rouge? CityStats provides some answers—solid numbers for otherwise slippery questions.

CityStats, the Foundation's indicators project, was launched in spring 2008 when hundreds of residents at open meetings deliberated what they wanted East Baton Rouge to become. From those conversations, the residents crafted shared visions for the community. And in order to track progress toward their goals for their home, they picked reliable indicators in nine categories, including environment, infrastructure and arts and culture—statistical vital signs measuring the health and well being of Baton Rouge. The Foundation will use CityStats to guide its projects and to help direct grants to issues that emerge from the data. The full indicators report is at BRCityStats.org.

They say that what happens in Las Vegas stays in Las Vegas.

But in Louisiana, living the good life is nothing to be ashamed of, says GSDM Idea City. In fact, the marketing firm wants the whole world to know that this is the place to come for people who want to make a life, instead of just a living. At football games, Louisianans holler until we're hoarse. We build lifelong bonds with our neighbors over evenings spent together on the front porch after work. We suck the meat out of crawfish tails—and the marrow out of life.

The Foundation retained Idea City to develop a branding campaign for the growing parishes along I-10 and I-12. The firm, which handles marketing for Southwest Airlines, promotes those parishes as an attractive place to settle for work-weary folks seeking the kind of balanced life and joie de vivre Louisiana has cultivated for centuries. Using mock-up ads, Idea City revealed the "Louisiana to the Rescue" campaign last year, which the Foundation has turned over to the state.

Katrina taught us all to be ready for the unexpected, and the Foundation quickly formed response plans for the next big storm. We were prepared for a flood of evacuees from the Gulf Coast, scrambling to higher ground, and we were equipped for the weeks and months of taking care of neighbors, following such a storm.

But with Hurricane Gustav, the Foundation found itself caring for our own instead, right here in Baton Rouge. When the storm knocked out the lights in our region for weeks, we quickly shifted to taking care of neighbors. After the hurricane, the Foundation assembled a crew to assess the region's needs, then to ferry food, ice and other necessities to local shelters.

Most of those shelters were well run; others left us a little unnerved. At one, hospice patients were living their final days wrapped in blankets on the floor. The Foundation's Partnership Relations department is now collaborating with responders and area shelters to formulate new standards and raise the bar for the quality of care that people can expect to receive at a time when they are most vulnerable. Those new standards will ensure that only genuinely capable people are charged with the duty of providing shelter from the storm.

The heart of a strong city pulses with people, with creativity, with new life. Continuing its commitment to create a downtown arts block surrounding the Shaw Center, the Foundation opened 12 lofts and 5,000 square feet of office space on Third Street. This year, the Arts Council of Greater Baton Rouge will locate in the office space, next to an upscale restaurant opened on the block, which is on the future town square.

Already, with the lofts rented, more people are moving downtown, expanding the customer base for retail and quickening the pulse of life lived round the clock in the heart of Baton Rouge.

Living in hurricane-prone territories, Louisianans have learned to be resourceful. And our best resource has always been our neighbors. After Katrina, the Foundation reached out to our neighbors in the east, down I-12, to engage leaders there and create the Northshore Community Foundation. This new partnership is creating land-use blueprints, allowing residents to channel growth into the communities where growth is needed most. It has also expanded philanthropy in St. Tammany, Tangipahoa, Washington and St. Helena parishes.

Last year, the Foundation lent a hand to our neighbors to the west, down I-10 and over to Lake Charles, where Hurricane Rita had ravaged the southwestern parishes. There, the Community Foundation of Southwest Louisiana was exploring how to expand its work. The support of the Baton Rouge Area Foundation—both financial and staff assistance—has grown the Community Foundation of Southwest Louisiana from $300,000 to more than $6 million. It's the kind of neighborliness that Louisianans have come to expect from each other.

Distance doesn't matter. From across the street or across the planet, fund donors of the Foundation now can do a world of good, thanks to an online portal launched last year.

They can review their grants, learn about nonprofits, monitor their charitable funds and recommend grants by using the portal, which can be reached anywhere there is an Internet connection.

Running behind the portal is the Foundation's accounting software. Developed by NorthStar, it has been tested in the most challenging environment, the mutual fund business.

The Foundation is just getting started. Over time, the portal will include more features and information, as desired by fund donors. The more they can do, the more we can do.

donor services

The sum of its parts was quite big. The Foundation and the Audubon Nature Institute wanted to create a new science destination that would educate, entertain and enlighten; it would spark riverfront development, kindle the local economy and become a beacon for Baton Rouge's future. The Foundation provided more than $750,000 in grants toward this vision, and the result was ALIVE, a $247 million science center that will include a theater, rare jungle cats in their natural habitats, a ride demonstrating the ferocity of storms and another that allows visitors to soar over the planet.

The ALIVE science center is expected to pay for itself within a decade. Mayor Kip Holden included the project in his bond issue, which, out of nearly 180,000 votes cast, fell short by about 3,000. But being greater than the sum of its parts, the ALIVE project is simply too good to just let go, so the designs are being refined as the mayor makes another run with his entire tax package this year.

They are hidden in plain sight. They are not homes; they are houses, neglected and dangerous. Live wires dangle from some of their walls with kids playing nearby. Abandoned property, it brings a good neighborhood down.

Baton Rouge has a new agency to put thousands of broken properties back into commerce.

Last year, the Foundation and Mayor Kip Holden created the East Baton Rouge Redevelopment Authority, which sprang from the Foundation's work to rebuild Old South Baton Rouge

Staffed in 2009, the Authority expects to use innovations to return neighborhoods to life. It's seeking millions in federal tax credits and other financing to get started.

The authority's impatience is welcome, especially by the people who want to be proud of their neighborhoods again.

John W. Barton Sr. Excellence in Nonprofit Management Award

Each of the last eight years, the Baton Rouge Area Foundation has honored extraordinary people working at the region's nonprofits. Fund donors of the Foundation nominate people for the John W. Barton Sr. Excellence in Nonprofit Management Award; past chairs choose the award winners.

In March, the Foundation disclosed the winners at its annual meeting of members. Each of the recipients receive $10,000 with just one request—they must enjoy the gift, not devote it to their work. Winners for 2008 were chosen from 16 nominees.

Elizabeth A. Betz, CASA executive director

Her name is Elizabeth, but she's known around Baton Rouge by the friendly "Liz." She's also known for nearly 15 years of service to CASA, shorthand for Court Appointed Special Advocates. The nonprofit Liz has grown since 1993 recruits and trains volunteers who represent abused and neglected children in the family court system. Ultimately, CASA finds permanent homes for the children.

Last year alone, the brigade of more than 100 volunteers found permanent homes for 110 kids. She has started Casa for CASA, an annual playhouse fundraiser designed to boost awareness of the organization and to raise more than $30,000 per year. CASA just completed a $2 million capital campaign for more room to provide more services.

Ginger A. Hunt, executive director of Primary Care Providers for a Healthy Feliciana

Ginger Hunt believes. In 1999, she used her line of credit for seed money to begin a rural health clinic to serve the poor in East Feliciana. To support the startup nonprofit, she worked as a nurse practitioner in Baton Rouge, driving 40 miles to Clinton to provide free services at the clinic. A decade later, the nonprofit has three clinics and serves about 9,000 patients. Her other efforts are numerous. They include a program to fight obesity among children and collaborative agreements to provide counseling for schoolchildren and their families.

Derek E. Gordon, president and CEO of the Arts Council of Greater Baton Rouge

Derek Gordon was partly pulled home by his memories: singing as a kid in his McKinley Street backyard; learning at LSU, where he has two degrees in music.

Coming home after running Jazz at Lincoln Center in New York, Gordon has initiated many programs and reignited the Community Fund for the Arts. He has expanded programs of the Community School for the Arts to include kids and adults. With jazz enthusiasts, he has launched the River City Jazz Masters series. He has partnered to create Sunday in the Park, the outdoor concert series in downtown. He has started a public arts program. All that in about two years.
