Creativity begins when a zero is dropped from the budget.

Along with the rest of the world, we were required to respond to the recession. With less money available for our daily work—and fund donors understandably tightening their budgets—the Foundation redirected its efforts in 2009.

We collaborated with select nonprofits on operating strategies and fund-raising campaigns. Our special projects staff, for instance, drew up fund-raising, marketing and business campaigns for 100 Black Men of Metro Baton Rouge, an extraordinary group of volunteers who mentor African American boys and operate a charter school.

Knowing that they needed to sharpen their focus, 100 Black Men worked with us to choose projects that matter the most. A local advertising agency worked pro bono to create a marketing strategy and polish the 100 Black Men brand. The Foundation collaborated with the nonprofit on a fund-raising campaign.

Now that the recession is over, the men of 100 Black Men are raising considerable sums to implement their new business plan.

You will see in these pages that we were also busy in other ways last year. We began a project to stop the unnecessary killing of thousands of adoptable pets in our region. Our partners, the city-parish among them, unveiled the follow-up strategy to accelerate an incredible rebound of downtown Baton Rouge. The East Baton Rouge Redevelopment Authority we formed with the parish garnered $60 million in New Markets Tax Credits that will be used for bridge financing for neglected parts of the city.

Not everything, though, came up a winner. We granted funds for research and design of Audubon Alive, a project that Foundation leaders believed would provide jobs, revive the riverfront, create a symbol of accomplishment and produce revenues to reduce the proposed bond issue for infrastructure. The voters said no.

And we continue on, thanks to the staff, our members and fund donors—all who believe that tomorrow will be more prosperous than today.

Sincerely,

The Baton Rouge Area Foundation

is among more than 700 community foundations across the country. We work to improve the quality of life for all people in the region. We do so in two ways.

First, we connect philanthropists with exceptional nonprofits to make sure the needs of our neighbors are met. Our donors, for instance, fund safe havens for abused women and children, provide vaccinations to prevent cancer and pay for teacher supplies. Last year, we provided thousands of grants worth $12.7 million.

Second, the Foundation invests in and manages pivotal projects. Working with partners, we have revitalized downtown Baton Rouge, are rebuilding neighborhoods between downtown and LSU, supporting the improvement of public education through experimental schools and much more.

Who we serve: We conduct projects and provide grants across South Louisiana. The Foundation works in St. Tammany, Tangipahoa, Washington and St. Helena parishes through the Northshore Community Foundation, a support organization that operates independently from a home base in Covington. The Foundation also supports the Community Foundation of Southwest Louisiana. Based in Lake Charles, that foundation serves Calcasieu, Beauregard, Allen, Cameron and Jefferson Davis parishes.

How we work: The Foundation is funded in several ways. One key way is through generous people who choose to start donor-advised funds to provide grants to nonprofit groups and community projects. Philanthropists can start a tax-deductible charitable fund for $10,000. To learn more about charitable funds, call Stewart Jones at 225.387.6126.

The Foundation also is funded through earnings on unrestricted assets, which were donated by philanthropists and grow over time.

Among Foundation assets is the Wilbur Marvin Foundation, which is comprised of real estate left by the late Wilbur Marvin.

Those real estate assets include the Hilton Capitol Center Hotel in Baton Rouge, as well as shopping centers in Louisiana, Florida, Texas and Puerto Rico. The real estate assets are managed by Commercial Properties Realty Trust.

What's our size: At year-end 2009, the Foundation had estimated assets of $533 million, making it among the top-20 largest community foundations in the country. Donors of the Foundation have provided the assets over 45 years. Since 1964, the Foundation has issued $225 million in grants to support our community. Also, the Foundation has contracted with for-profit organizations to provide social benefits to the region, such as guidance on health care reform and direction on whether to build a new airport or invest in our existing ones.

More information is available at BRAAF.org or by calling Mukul Verma at 225.387.6126.

In Old South Baton Rouge,
new look.

When a neighborhood dies, it leaves behind blighted homes, derelict buildings, empty streets. Resurrecting it often takes all the faith and persistence that a community can muster. But, as the Foundation has helped to prove, it can be done. Ten years in, the Foundation and its cohorts have drawn more than $1.5 billion in public and private investments to downtown Baton Rouge. Last year, with partners, we released a sequel to the original downtown revival strategy, and now implementation is on its way.

City lights

After just five years, the Foundation's strategy to rebuild the broken neighborhoods in Old South Baton Rouge has achieved some very visible success. Families are moving back, making homes of new houses and making old houses livable once again. New condos have been built at the North Gates of LSU, and a shopping center with a drugstore is now under construction there.

This year, land acquired by the Foundation at Terrace Avenue and Nicholson Drive will be the site for a blend of affordable and market-rate housing with ground floor retail developed by Gulf Coast Housing Partnership. The outcome will be to breathe new life into a neighborhood some have given up for gone.

The economy being what it was, the Foundation and its donors were understandably frugal in 2009. So it was important that we help find ways for nonprofits to offset shortfalls due to the decreased availability of grants. We dispatched the special projects team to collaborate with nonprofits in writing business plans and fundraising strategies. Among those we assisted were the LSU School of Veterinary Medicine, 100 Black Men of Metro Baton Rouge, Prevent Child Abuse Louisiana and Health Centers in Schools.

For example, the special projects team repositioned 100 Black Men, which mentors African American boys, and drew up means to raise the money to expand its capacity. The Foundation gave a $100,000 challenge grant to implement the 100 Black Men master plan. Now, 100 Black Men is raising $1 million to increase its operations, including those at a charter school that gives children a second chance.

In-kind contribution... and more

With resources, getting children on their way.

Body in motion

Most of us think of our Golden Years as a time to rest easy and look back on a life of accomplishments. But not Dr. William Hansel of Pennington Biomedical Research Center. Believing the best was still ahead, he set a goal for himself: curing cancer. In his 80s, Dr. Hansel and LSU researchers devised drugs that could seek out and pierce cancer cells, then eliminate them. Through a venture capital fund, the Foundation invested in his method, as well as good ideas born in other Louisiana labs. Hansel's brainchild holds the promise of beating breast cancer, along with many other forms of the disease.

Last year, it went into human clinical trials for toxicity—an important step toward its eventual use in treatment. If a drug reaches market, it's expected to produce at least $1 billion in annual sales, spinning off royalties to LSU. Back at the lab, Dr. Hansel continues to experiment.

A clever scientific trick to kill killer cells.

In NOLA, they ask for Audubon.
Baton Rouge, not so much.

It was a beacon of possibility. The Foundation invested $350,000 on research and design for

Alive, is not

Audubon Alive. The interactive

science destination was expected to lure thousands each year to return to the riverfront in downtown Baton Rouge. The destination would have employed hundreds and sparked redevelopment along the river, just as similar projects have in Chattanooga and other cities. And Audubon Alive was projected to produce income to reduce a $989 million bond issue for infrastructure from 30 years to about 18. However, voters rejected the bond issue in November 2009. The consensus appears to be that the electorate was against the tax, in part, because of Audubon Alive.

Handle with care

In coming years, a project begun by the Foundation and animal rights advocates will not only spare the lives of dogs and cats, but will also make us more human. In the spring, we wondered why nearly 10,000 dogs and cats were put down each year in East Baton Rouge. Together, animal rights advocates and the special projects team at the Foundation researched the problem and crafted a solution.

The No Kill movement has shown us that reducing unnecessary euthanasia of dogs and cats is a reasonable and worthwhile goal. So, in less than a year, a new nonprofit was created with the purpose of increasing pet sterilization, while providing homes for adoptable animals that otherwise would either roam the streets of our community or meet untimely ends.

For a dog, a house.

People who toil for wages get a safe place to sleep.

Let's build a grim apartment house and stack the working class and impoverished into it. That was the failed idea behind New Orleans' squalid St. Bernard Housing Project. Hurricane Katrina finally took out the project. Now, St. Bernard is being replaced with a purpose-built community where everything—parks, schools, retail, work—is all nearby.

We've seen it happen elsewhere. In Atlanta, Eastlake is the reinvention of a housing project around a golf course that provides a share of profits to fund community efforts. It's a model that works. In the Crescent City, the Baton Rouge Area Foundation teamed with the Bayou District Foundation to fund a design from Dover-Kohl of Miami. The blueprint they provided ensures that the parts of the former St. Bernard work in harmony. People can gather on porches behind their homes, for instance, getting to know their neighbors and building a genuine community.

Through our Commercial Properties Realty

Trust, the Foundation expects to build spaces for all the at-hand necessities of a functioning community: a grocery, a pharmacy, a dry cleaners and more.

Most important, people of different incomes are living together as neighbors.

There's even a waiting list of the better-to-do wanting a new home where once there was no hope.

Harmony in NOLA

A prescription for all of us.

Bringing people together and building consensus is not easy when the issue is health care reform. Some time back, two leaders of the Baton Rouge Area Foundation were asked to lend a hand in doing just that. Believing the challenge would take no more than a few months, they agreed. It wasn't until five years later, though, in the fall of 2009,

A jolt to the system that health care CEOs announced a historic partnership aimed at improving medical care for the poor. The deal will shift surgeries and other overnight stays at the antiquated Earl K. Long Charity Hospital to Our Lady of the Lake. That's about 6,000 patients per year. LSU is also expanding clinics to provide more services nearer to the patients who need them. And the plan has other benefits—a Level 1 trauma center will finally be built in Baton Rouge, interns can learn more medicine at the Lake, and the State of Louisiana was spared $400 million for a new charity hospital. The Baton Rouge Area Foundation assisted when requested in bringing the parties together to the bargaining table, providing the necessary diplomacy for an alliance thought to be impossible. And the underpinning is the Foundation's $2.5 million investment in expert research from PricewaterhouseCoopers and The Lewin Group to ensure that health care realignment endures here and across Louisiana.

Back where we belong.

For too many years, we've watched other places rise and flourish, thanks to New Markets Tax Credits, while Baton Rouge has stood by, waiting. Now it's our turn. Along with local government, the Foundation has created the East Baton Rouge Redevelopment Authority, which obtained $60 million of the tax credits last year. Selling those tax credits will raise funds to improve neighborhoods that are in distress. The money will bridge financial gaps for creating new housing, retail, office and public works projects. The Authority, which began its work last year, will underpin its investments with master plans to fix our broken neighborhoods. The ongoing master plans are being created now by the very people who call those neighborhoods home.

Interior department

For the children

From negotiating to end the desegregation suit to underwriting Teach For America, the Foundation and our fund donors have been at the forefront of bettering public education for decades. Last year, we partnered with the school system, businesses and civic leaders to champion the idea of a career training center. The school system is expected to build the center soon, giving high school students an option to learn job skills so they can be employed immediately upon graduation. The center will also make sure the students learn the fundamentals needed to advance to college, if they choose. In addition to the career training center, the Foundation also provided research and assistance to educational leaders for starting a digital media, science and technology charter school. That school, the Mentorship Academy, will begin this fall in downtown Baton Rouge.

Teach them well.

John W. Barton Sr. Excellence in Nonprofit Management Award

Each of the last nine years, the Baton Rouge Area Foundation has honored extraordinary people working at the region's nonprofits. Fund donors of the Foundation nominate people for the John W. Barton Sr. Excellence in Nonprofit Management Award; past chairs choose the award winners.

In March, the Foundation disclosed the winners at its annual meeting of members. Each of the recipients receive $10,000 with just one request—they must enjoy the gift, not devote it to their work.

Kathy G. Arnes, President, Junior Achievement of Greater Baton Rouge and Acadiana

Most treasured possession: “My daddy made me a nativity scene that we still display each year at Christmas. He made it out of orange crates, and though of not great monetary value, it holds so many memories of our family Christmases and the love he had for us.”

Kathe Hambrick-Jackson, Founder and Executive Director, River Road African American Museum

How she would spend $1 billion to improve South Louisiana:

"I'd build schools in remote places where children could learn about science and art. It would be a safe place where they could look at the sky at night and dream; where they could learn to fish and watch birds fly high in the sky after a hard day of work in the classroom."

Gaylynn Mack, Executive Director, Big Buddy

Favorite hero of fiction: "Wonder Woman. She always conquered evil without breaking a sweat. Always calm, looking good and armed with just the right tools. Her powers include super-strength, super-speed, super-stamina, super-agility and flight. Her main weapon, the lasso, always got to the truth of the matter."
